1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-4, 6-14 and 23-26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Tamura et al (US 6,306,577).

Tamura shows that it is known in the art to determine the rate at which some characteristic which can be measured by an optical test changes by determining the time which is required for the optical measurement to change from one level to another. The system of Tamura is an optical measurement (column 3, line 27-29; column 7, lines 30-34), which, as well known in the art, can be routinely measured by means of a system with a light source and a detector which send light to and receives light from the sample. The reference specifically mentions that the measurement can be "transmitted light intensity" (column 1, line 27; column 2, line 52), which at least clearly suggests having the light source and detector positioned opposite each other relative to the sample. The second threshold level is inherently "a predetermined percentage" of the first, any two thresholds values can be presented as one being a predetermined percentage of the other. The use of such a system would be obvious to use with any measurement which changes over time.

The reference teaches the use of calibration curves for different reactions be used to determine the amount of the substance being measured for (column 6, lines 59-60; column 8, lines 44-46; column 10, lines 65-66). Note that the reference teaches that the comparison with the calibration curve be done "automatically" (column 8, line 45); this requires that the curve be stored in computer memory in some manner, using a look-up table is a known manner of storing data in a computer memory and would have been obvious. It is notes that the instant specification does not disclose any details of how the "look-up table" is constructed or used, but rather assumes that look-up tables are so well known in the art that no disclosure beyond mere mention is required for adequate disclosure.

3. The art does not appear to teach "recording a maximum intensity of light transmitted through said ampoule by . . . identifying when said intensity of light transmitted through said ampoule stops increasing". Thus claims 15 is allowable, as are claims 17-22 dependent thereon.

4. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

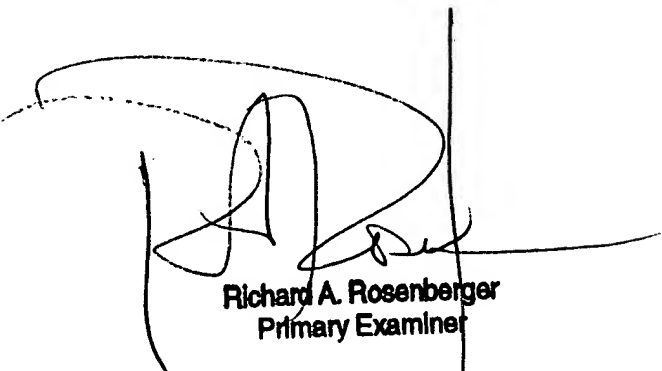

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
